San Miguel Island is owned by the U.S. Navy and operated by the National Park Service. There are risks inherent in visiting any wild remote place like the Channel Islands. On San Miguel there are additional risks stemming from the island's historic use as a bombing and missile test range.

To visit San Miguel Island, you must acknowledge that you have been informed of these risks and that you agree to hold the U.S. Government harmless of any liability. It is therefore important that you read the following carefully before signing:

SMI contains the danger of property damage and permanent, painful, disabling and disfiguring injury or death due too high explosive detonations from falling objects such as aircraft, aerial targets, live ammunition, missiles, bombs, etc.

SMI contains the danger of property damage and permanent, painful, disabling and disfiguring injury or death due to the presence of expended, but still live, bombs, rockets, cannon rounds, flares and other types of warheads. Unexploded munitions may be encountered anywhere within SMI: lying on the ground partially or completely buried. These munitions can still explode though they may have lain on the island for decades. I have been instructed NOT to approach or disturb any military equipment or ordnance discovered on SMI.

In addition to the risks posed by ordnance items, visitors to SMI are also exposed to any or all of the hazards that present on any of the other islands in the National Park. In signing this agreement, I agree to be sure I am informed of and that I abide by all regulations and safety precautions enumerated in park bulletins.

Upon my own initiative, therefore, and at my own risk, I accept permission to enter this area and in consideration of such permission do, for myself, my spouse, my children, my heirs, personal representatives, and assignees of the same, remise, release, and forever discharge as well as agree to indemnify and hold harmless the United States Government, any lessee therefrom, and individual officer, agent, employee, or director thereof from any claim of liability for injury, death, or property damage arising out of my usage or presence upon said San Miguel Island in accordance with permission to enter thereon.

I further affirm that I will never prosecute or assist in prosecuting any civil action against the United States Government, the U.S. Navy, the U.S. Department of Interior, or any of their agents, employees, service members, contractors, or lessees for claim or liability arising from my entry to SMI.
